of CaliforniaSHOULD AID THE REFUGEES.

The Mormon refugees from northern Mexico, now gathered in El Paso, may be in need of more assistance than can be extended by the church. If they are, their distress should be made known as there are thousands of men and women in Ogden, Salt Lake and other parts of Utah willing to offer a helping hand.

The driving out of the Mormon farmers from the settlements in northern Mexico is an act of brutality on the part of the rebels which calls for our sympathy for those so outrageously dispossessed of home and resources, and we should be quick to respond.

Later on we, as a people, should demand that Mexico indemnify the colonists for their losses, not only as figured in property but in mental distress.

Our advice to the colonists is to keep out of Mexico. The hatreds and unrest of the rebels will continue long after the conflict has ended, and the Mormon settlers, if they remain in northern Mexico, will be subjected to many abuses. They should journey back to Utah and help develop that part of the state which now undeveloped, awaits the coming of the sturdy sons of toil to yield a rich return.

WALKING AND VEGETARIANISM.

Chas. Schladitz, a German walked into the Standard office today to spread the gospel of the vegetarian. He is 57 years old and has been on the road from San Rafael, California, to Ogden since July 20. He said he had a message to convey. Five years ago he grew weak, and consulted a doctor, who diagnosed his case as hopeless. He had rheumatism, heart disease and kidney trouble. He paid $1 for the examination and $3 for a bottle of medicine. When he went home, he threw the medicine into the gutter and started out to find health in the works of a famous German vegetarian. Gradually he gained strength. Then he decided to try getting close to nature, so he started on his long tramp which is not to end until he enters New York City on his way to the Fatherland. The fifth day out from San Rafael his aches left him and since then he has regained his old vitality and today he is supple and happy.

The old man is to write a book—not for his enemy's sake, but to let all mankind know where the fountain of youth is to be found. We are not quite certain that his vegetarianism is the panacea he represents it to be, but we do believe in muscular exertion, whether it be walking across the continent or simply hoeing the weeds in the garden, or chopping the kindling wood for the kitchen fire. Much of the sickness of "city-folks" is traceable to the lethargy which allows important muscles to cease to perform their full duty.

SUPPRESSING THE NEWS.

One of our exchanges tells how the senate of the United States suppresses important information:

Most dramatic of all American strikes in many years was that in Lawrence. No less was it important for the direct results following the outbreak, as well as for the light it shed on labor conditions for 400,000 workers, and the symptoms of industrial disease that broke out with startling virulence when the price of five small loaves of bread a week was subtracted by the woolen trust from the operatives' pay envelopes.

In fact, the importance of the Lawrence outbreak could hardly be overstated. Charles P. Neill, federal commissioner of labor, was sent to investigate conditions in New England mills, and he made an exhaustive report. It was painstaking and thorough, and presumably a valuable contribution to the fund of knowledge on human relations so vital that many people believe the life of the nation is involved in their right adjustment.

In view of this, the treatment of Neill's report by the senate was interesting. It ordered only 2127 copies of the document printed, and as a matter of "economy" refuses to extend the issue, which is small enough to be absorbed by the senators and dropped back into the oblivion of their office recesses. The explanation is simple. The Neill report is not a good kind to have circulating during a campaign. It shows that in an industry tariff-protected for the ostensible preservation of an American standard of living, the average weekly wages in full times are $8.76 per family, with wives and children helping to keep the wolf from the door.

Unless public opinion is roused sufficiently to make a noise around the senate wing of the capitol there will be no copies of Neill's report for general circulation—at least until this campaign is over.

THE PEACH, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

Mayor Decker of Provo, who was in Ogden yesterday, expressed confidence in the future of the fruit industry in Utah. He said his information from the east was to the effect that there has been a failure of the peach crop in many states and that, although several states have large yields, there will be a good demand for Utah and Colorado peaches.

There are hundreds of acres of new peach orchards coming into bearing in Utah and upward of 2,000 carloads of fruit will be shipped out of the state, but this heavy output can be successfully marketed, according to Mr. Decker, if the fruit growers co-operate.

The Utah peach, the mayor says, has a finer flavor and is a better shipper than any other peach in the United States, with the exception of the Colorado fruit which is grown under similar conditions of soil and climate, and these two qualities will afford the Utah peach grower a profit on his output when other fruit goes begging on the market. But the good qualities must be emphasized by advertising.

Mr. Decker has had peaches en route to market 32 days, and, at the end of that time, the fruit has been taken from the refrigerator cars in perfect condition.

On the Chicago auction market, where fruit is sold on its merits, Utah peaches have topped the market on days when as high as eighty-seven cars have been disposed of by the auctioneers.

By making the Eastern people understand that Utah peaches are superior fruit for preserving purposes, the problem of successfully disposing of the increasing crop will be solved. This advertising should be "catchy" and to the point. Just at present the apple crop of the country, which is over 100,000,000 bushels, is receiving the benefit of a news item which is to the effect that the apple clears a woman's complexion, if eaten in large quantities. We do not know how true this is, but we are certain that, as the item finds countless thousands of readers, there will be a decided increase in the consumption of apples. We do not believe in misleading advertisements and would not advise the sending out of a "complexion" boost for peaches, unless it can be demonstrated that peaches, canned or otherwise preserved, do make homely women more attractive. In all truth, it can be said that preserved peaches can be made to satisfy the child's craving for bread and jam and will prevent many a harsh word when the wife, belated at meal time, hurriedly meets the needs of the moment by placing an appetizing glass of peaches with cream before the impatient husband.

Preserved peaches in the winter will supply the fruit acids which the system craves and, eaten regularly, will aid in preventing biliousness, an affliction that causes more nervous wrecks and destroys more peace of mind than any other ailment that sedentary employment or unnatural habits of living inflicts.

Peaches are more healthful than prunes and prunes have been eaten for a century or more, principally because they are supposed to be "good for the constitution."

"The Utah peach, for health and happiness," should be the slogan of the Utah peach growers.

TURKS WILL FAST FOR THIRTY DAYS

Constantinople, Aug. 9.—During the Ramadan, the annual Mohammedan fast of thirty days, beginning August 13, when Musselmans are compelled to fast every day from sunrise to sunset, the inhabitants of the Turkish capital are to be allowed to remain out of doors until 2 o'clock in the morning. Instead of only until midnight as at present.

The newspapers controlled by the committee of union and progress naturally resent the restrictions of martial law which was proclaimed on August 5 for a period of forty days. The Young Turk, however, says it is the patriotic duty of every Ottoman subject not to impede the actions of the government.

If the latter succeeds in removing the present difficulties and imminent dangers threatening the country, it deserves all the credit. The Tamin says it is prepared to support the government provided the interests and honor of the fatherland are safeguarded even though this should entail the return of the old Sultan, Abdul Hammed.

It is proposed further to erect a marble coliseum closely following the lines of the Greek Pantheon, as a hall of fame. The latter will be built from funds collected throughout the civi-
